IV. Activities and used methods

Lesson observation

Cultural trips – sightseeing visits in Corlu where participants learn more about the local culture.

International table – participants present their culture to the hosts and other participants, including traditional dishes, dances, songs, and customs.

Local Cuisine and Art seminars – organizing workshops related to local cuisine, music, and arts. This helps participants get closer to the local people and learn more about their cultural identity.

Learning-by-doing method – simulations, case studies, gamification and role-playing, which allow participants to become familiar with the practical aspect of theory

Project work in small groups – creating mini-projects on a given topic that participants present at the end of each working day. This stimulates teamwork, critical thinking and innovative solutions.

Visiting local institutions and organizations – for example, schools or organizations working in the same field, which provides an opportunity to exchange experiences and ideas with local professionals.

Interviews and feedback – surveys, feedback forms or short peer discussion during meeting minutes to get feedback from participants about the program and used methods. Certification and presentation of results – providing certificates of participation and organizing a presentation of the achieved results and outcomes.

Follow-up activities - presentations and reports to colleagues and students; seminars and workshops; articles and publications in various websites, social medias, school and local newspapers.
